

The Public Health Advocacy Institute of WA (PHAIWA) is launching an exciting new research translation program in 2018 - Pathway to Policy

Are you an early-mid career researcher or practitioner?

Do you want to see your research inform government and other agency decision making but not sure how to go about it?

It is not always clear how evidence is used in policy decisions in a highly politicised environment where there are many competing demands.

With a large number of competing, worthy, evidence based causes - no matter how effective the research or project - the government or policy makers may not act on it.

This FREE, 5 module, fully-online course, will offer the skills to researchers and practitioners to better enable this to occur.

Email phaiwa@curtin.edu.au for more information or to register your interest